GYLEEN X. FITZGERALD

Gyleen X. Fitzgerald is a chemical engineer by day and a writer and quilter all the time. Her quilts blend colour, pattern, and texture providing a contemporary essence to traditional quilting. Gyleen's quilting awards include best of show and numerous blue ribbons in both local and national competitions. Her written works center on haiku poetry, quilt patterns and the crème de la crème, children's books. Quilts: Unfinished Stories with New Endings is her fourth book.

Dear Caroline,
It's seems like I've been gone from France forever. Thomas works long hours tending to the family's dairy farm which is more demanding than the grape orchard at home. We live in a log cabin built by his grandfather. They call it old, but it's new compared to our home in France. I've taken to quilting each night after supper and started a log cabin quilt from my old dresses. Remember the blue dress you made for me years ago? I wore it every time I was home sick. What little is left is now in the quilt. On Wednesday's, Sarah Thomas' sister comes over to learn French. I can't understand a word she says. Miss you terribly.

Your sister,
Isabelle
